Law Class Directory

CLASS OF

'95

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

WM. C. MICHAELS,
COMPILER.

KANSAS CITY, MO.
GERARD-WOODY PRINTING CO.
1897.

Our Colors,

Pink and Maroon.

Our Yell,

*Canach! Canach!
Caniver! Canaw!
Michigan! Michigan!
Ninety-five Law!!!*

Our Motto,

*Free Lunchibus est our Long-suitibus.

(*I have forgotten what our real motto was; tried hard to find somebody that could remember it, but failed; so, as the above speaks a great truth, applying to many others as well as myself, I have adopted it.)

SOME RAMBLING REMARKS.

MY DEAR CLASSMATES:

Here it is. I hope it pleases you. I am glad it is finished, then again I'm not glad. Glad, because it's over and because I've got rid of a mighty hard job; (it was a hard job.) Then I'm not at all glad when I think that the immense pleasure I derived from reading the responses from the different fellows is at an end; about the same kind of a feeling we had when we were leaving Ann Arbor in June, '95. We were satisfied with ourselves and glad we had our degree, that it was all over and that we would have no more hard study; but sorry, mighty sorry, to say farewell to the 'Varsity, the town and the friends we had grown to love.

This book will tell you where your long lost friends are, and I hope will prove the means of renewing many acquaintances and friendships of college days, as well as establishing a business intercourse among us. I would like very much to answer separately each letter I received, but there are too many, so I'll answer them all in this. The letters were very encouraging, commended the undertaking and offered assistance of the writers. Nearly all the fellows spoke of how they were getting along, and to judge from the letters, one would say, that for the uniform success of its members, no class on earth ever equalled ours. About ninety per cent are practicing law. A few started out all right, but got discouraged, quit and are now on another tackle. Some never intended to practice and are now doing well in other vocations. A few got lost in the shuffle and all efforts to locate them have met with failure. Death has broken into our ranks and claimed two of the fellows.

While I am not completely satisfied with this book, I feel that it is a success; but I fear, not a financial success, and if I ever had a thought that I'd make any money out of it, I long since ceased to entertain it. You who have paid for the book and you who have ordered it and intend to pay for it, would be surprised to know how many of the fellows encouraged (?) me by failing to order a copy. But if every man who ordered a copy will send in his money, all expenses will be met, and your "Uncle Fuller" will feel very much relieved. You have probably forgotten whether or not you sent the price with your response, but as I have kept a very careful record of those who have paid, you may rest assured that if this page has two blue pencil marks on it, you are still "shy in the pot," and I hope it will not be necessary for me to again ask you for your remittance.

In this connection I will say that I got a letter from our Brother Storie which makes me smile every time I see it. It's too good to keep. Here it is: "Your stereotyped postal came duly to hand and I have carefully noted contents. Yes, the object of your directory is apparent, and I will say that if you are short of clothes at this time, you ought to take the most direct route, and simply say 'kindly send me fifty cents, which amount I can use to advantage.' * * * *

"Wishing for your continued success, and hoping that you may have roped in enough of the boys to warrant your graft, I am, Very truly, E. H. STORIE."

I received a lot of good letters, and if space permitted I would print them all. But here is part of one from Vogan:

"I was thrown into a momentary consternation when I received your printed letter. I imagined you standing on some eminence in Kansas City shouting toward the four corners of the earth in the terrible voice with which you used to lead the '95 yell:

'I want your address;
I want it bad!
Send it quick,
B'gad! B'gad!!'

"Now, Michaels, don't work yourself into a passion about my address, for passions are very exhausting, and I am anxious for you to live till you finish that directory, for I want one of them.

"I am not a notary, neither am I a bigamist, or a pretender to the throne of any kingdom; in fact there are many things I am not.

"I am practicing law a little more than I am loafing, loafing a little more than I am running a livery stable, and doing the latter none at all; though they do get a horse on me occasionally."

* * * *

Spencer says: "You got me right where I live this time. I am associated with myself in the law business. I am not a notary because I am so crooked that nobody cares to have his autograph appear at the bottom of my bond."

* * * *

Kirby wrote, in part, as follows: "I got your letter, and also your 'little postal' of Feby. 27th all right, but could not muster up enough self esteem to believe that you cared a ——— where I was or what I was doing. However, since you have taken the trouble to write again asking for a few data concerning my social status, and the locus in quo of my 'domicile of adoption,' I will cheerfully furnish you with the desired information. In doing so however, I am not, I assure you, animated by any desire to stimulate feelings of envy in the bosoms of any members of the class of '95, who may not have been so fortunate (?) in piling up symmetrical chunks of the 'mammon of iniquity.'"

* * * *

"My connection with the aforesaid firm is not of the partnership variety in the premises, but rather of an ancillary character. My duties consist chiefly in courteously according gratuitous information to persons soliciting an interview with the members of the said firm; in keeping the floors and desks free from earthly deposits; in clarifying the windows; in trying to teach delinquent financiers that practical common sense acts carry far more weight with the business community than the most meteoric rhetorical flights through the realms of speculative finance; in occasionally attempting to make a happy blending of law and equity in Justice Court cases; and finally in 'bohning' like h———over the reports and text books, statutes, etc., so as to lay a foundation for the majestic edifice which in time is to be my reward, if I am one of the fortunate ones in whose career is to be exemplified the truth of Prof. Thompson's familiar aphorism, 'all things come to him who waits.'"

* * * *

Of course, all of you have read in the papers of the new honor that has been thrust upon "Prexy" Angell. We were all glad of it, and know that President McKinley could not have found a better man. I have just been advised that Dean Harry B.

LEWIS' BLACKSTONE CONTAINS 2000 PAGES.

Hutchins has accepted the post of acting president of the University during President Angell's absence, and, of course, all "Laws" will be gratified to know this.

I am advised that our Cooley bust still stands in the law library without sign or mark to show the wondering stranger what it is, or whence it came.

Whatever did become of that historic bronze plate, can't some one tell me?

And about the reunion;—you know that at one of our last harmonious (?) meetings we decided to hold our first reunion at Ann Arbor, Commencement week, in 1900. I have resolved to be there, if I am alive, and I hope that every one of you has made the same resolution, and will keep it.

The annual Inter-Collegiate Oratorical contest was held in University Hall, Ann Arbor, May 8th, and of course we won. It was the sixth consecutive victory for Michigan. Ames was the name of the man that represented Michigan.

The recently issued calendar shows 2975 students enrolled in the 'Varsity this year, of whom 584 are in the Law Department.

Answering several letters as to how I have "got along," will say, as did one of our fellows, that I am strictly among the "growing crops." I have a fine free lunch route established, and by working it "real smooth," manage to make enough to pay my board. The people of this place are like those in other places where our fellows have settled, to wit: very dull and stupid, and are slow to recognize genius, and that's why I'm poor.

Notwithstanding the beautiful successes reported by nearly all of the class, I believe that their present condition was most aptly described by Maj. Wm. Warner at a recent banquet of the Bar Association of this city. He said: "Well, 'Tich' and I didn't expect to do very much the first year or two, and our expectations were a d—ed sight more than realized."

I wish to thank each of you for the assistance you rendered me by sending in the addresses of other fellows, and also for the kind and encouraging assurances your letter contained. I hope each of you will write to me what you think of the book, and your ideas as to a second edition, say in a couple of years from now. And I shall be grateful for the present address of any of those I have been unable to locate.

Please remit in anything but postage stamps or private check.

Wishing each of you all kinds of success, and hoping to see you at the reunion in 1900, I am

Yours fraternally,

Kansas City, Mo., May 15, 1897.

In Memoriam.

JONAS E. KENDEIGH.

Was born in North Amherst, Ohio in 1867, and died of pneumonia in the same town, Feby. 18, 1896, after an illness of about two weeks.

He intended to open an office in North Amherst in March, 1896. I knew Kendeigh intimately, and can sincerely say that, of those whom I knew and had a chance to observe, he was the hardest working student in our class.

ELBERT A. WATSON,

Was born in Alexandria, Va., July 22, 1867, and died of consumption in the same town Sept. 23, 1895.

At an early age, Watson was left an orphan and penniless, but by hard labor he managed to earn and save enough money to take him through two years in the High School at Ann Arbor and to finish the Law Course. His zeal, energy and ability were well known to all members of the class.

PROF. WALTER DENTON SMITH,

Died at his home in Galesburg, Ills., Nov. 20, 1896.

"GOOD WINE NEEDS NO BUSH."

But we will permit you to drink at the fountain before purchasing.

SOMETHING ENTIRELY NEW.
SPACE WILL NOT PERMIT AN EXPLANATION OF THE MANY FEATURES, BUT WE WILL SEND A VOLUME FOR EXAMINATION.

FIRST.—TO THE LAWYER this work is invaluable, as every decision or text book that has ever referred to Blackstone is cited in the foot-notes.

A good point was suggested by one of the subscribers to Lewis's Blackstone, and which is worthy of repetition. A lawyer finds a principle in Lewis's Blackstone supported by a case in the foot-notes, and since the citation comes from a judge who has quoted Blackstone in support of his opinion, taking this case as a starting point, he goes to Shepard's or Knowles' Annotations, where he finds all the cases which have followed the one he begins with, found in Lewis's Blackstone, and follows it to the present; thereby he makes his brief to 1897 with Blackstone as a foundation and the Annotations, made by judges. Can any other work of this kind be shown? This is one of the NEW features of Lewis's Blackstone.

SECOND—When a lawyer has the facts in a case and has determined his line of action, it is frequently difficult to get a case governing the principle, but in the above way a case can be found, as no principle can arise that cannot be found in the text or foot-notes of Lewis's Blackstone.

It is better to explore a stream from the fountain head than approach it midway and follow its course.

STUDY OF LAW MADE EASY

this work without the aid of a LAW DICTIONARY or GLOSSARY. A most complete INDEX, showing every principle to be found in the text or in the notes, is a feature not to be found in any other edition.

A feature for the Law Student is to be found in the translation of all LATIN, GREEK, NORMAN FRENCH, ITALIAN quotations, etc., found either in the text or in the notes, and placed in the foot-notes upon the page where found, so that the student can read

New Edition Blackstone's Commentaries

The only edition containing notes and references to all text books and decisions wherein the Commentaries have been cited, and all statutes modifying the text.

What Judge Hulett of New York, says of the work:

HULETT & GIBBS,
ATTORNEYS AND COUNSELORS AT LAW,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
P. B. HULETT. E. O. GIBBS.

45 Trust Bldg., Dec. 23, 1896.

E. J. Bosworth & Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—I have examined with a good deal of care the advanced proof sheets of the little work entitled "Famous Legal Arguments," by Mr. Field, and I take pleasure in saying that it contains some of the most notable arguments made in the United States, and is a book containing a large amount of information for, not only lawyers, but all persons engaged in arguments before the public. I commend the same to the public.

Dictated P. B. H.

Very truly yours,

P. B. HULETT.

Note District Attorney A. B. Dunsmore's remarks regarding the book:

LAW OFFICE,
ANDREW B. DUNSMORE,
DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

Wellsboro, Pa., Dec. 30, 1896.

E. J. Bosworth & Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Gentlemen:—It affords me considerable pleasure to recommend Mr. Field's little volume "Famous Legal Arguments." It is all that its title indicates, and if only perused for the purpose of legal recreation, it will be found both entertaining and instructive; but in addition to this I am sure the profession, and particularly the younger members of it, will find its many useful ideas and hints of great practical value and help to them in the trial of causes.

Truly yours

A. B. DUNSMORE.

...THE...

HISTORICAL DEVELOPMENT

—OF—

CODE PLEADING

BY CHARLES M. HEPBURN

Of the Cincinnati Bar.

Defining and Illustrating the Essentials of Code Pleading from the side of its Historical Development in America and England.

With Special Reference to the Codes of New York, Missouri, California, Kentucky, Iowa, Minnesota, Indiana, Ohio, Oregon, Washington, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Kansas, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, Montana, Arizona, North Carolina, South Carolina, Wyoming, Utah, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut and Oklahoma.

The book defines clearly and briefly the place now occupied by code pleading in general, and by each of the codes in particular. It puts the practitioner into touch with his code as part of a great statutory system of pleading,—modern, still in its formative stages, but already more widely established on both sides of the Atlantic than was ever the common law, even in its palmiest days.

It explains, as briefly as is consistent with clearness, the nature of code pleading.

It classifies the States of the Union according to the character of their systems of pleadings.

It discusses the causes which led to the overthrow of common law pleading, and gave character to the codes.

It narrates briefly the historical movement in England and America for a statutory reform of the pleading, and gives the leading facts in the enactment of each of our codes, tracing each to its source.

It indicates the cardinal points of agreement and contrast between our codes.

It examines the relation of the codes to the New York Code of 1848, and its amendments; points out the history of the codes with respect to their stability; considers the proposed New York Revision of 1896; and defines the place of the codes of civil procedure in the movement for codification in general.

It gives the history of the partial adoption of code pleading in the Federal Courts, and makes clear the law on the subject.

It points out the leading facts in the recent rise of code pleading in England; shows its suggestive relations to code pleading in America; and examines the cardinal matters of agreement between the two systems.

It explains and illustrates the nature of several innovations of the English Code, due to its later development, especially its provisions for securing expedition in procedure and elasticity in the system. It narrates briefly the still more recent progress of code pleading in the British Colonies, especially in Ontario, New Zealand, Victoria, and Nova Scotia, where, as in England, the change is of unusual value to the American lawyer, being a later and consistent development of the fundamental idea expressed in our codes of civil procedure.

It is the only book on its subject, and its subject is one of great importance to all lawyers who would reach the foundation and be familiar with the nature of code pleading.

Superintendents of Schools, and other Educators almost without number.

THE BEST FOR PRACTICAL USE.

It is easy to find the word wanted.
It is easy to ascertain the pronunciation.
It is easy to trace the growth of a word.
It is easy to learn what a word means.

William R. Harper, Ph.D., D.D., President University of Chicago, says:—A copy of Webster's International Dictionary always lies on my table and I find myself constantly referring to it. My satisfaction in using it constantly increases. It is thoroughly reliable and full of just the information one wishes to secure.—April 7, 1896.
